

WITH FAITH IN MIND

Partners working for better mental health

On May 26th, Churches Together in Lancashire will be hosting a day at Whalley Abbey to help church and other faith representatives explore how local churches can help address issues of poor mental health and well-being in their community.

The day will include:

- Keynote speakers from the Health, Faith and Voluntary Sector
- A range of workshops exploring on different aspects of this agenda
- Showcases celebrating some of the excellent practice in local churches

During the day we hope you will:

- learn more about current issues in community well-being,
- discover the opportunities for churches to be funded to work with health partners as part of the new integrated care system (ICS),
- explore the skills involved in this work,
- understand the biblical basis for this work with our communities, and importantly
- celebrate what churches already do to help their communities

The day will be of benefit to those already involved in this work, but also those whose churches are beginning to explore how they might reach out in this way. There will be no charge for attendance but as places will be limited will require registration. The details of this will be available shortly. Please note the day in your diary.

Mike Hart & Peter Lumsden

Churches Together in Lancashire Working for Social Justice